

Vontobel Award for Research on Age(ing) 2022

Once a year, the Center for Gerontology of the University of Zurich awards the Vontobel Award for Research on Age(ing) endowed by the Vontobel Foundation. The maximal prize sum of CHF 30'000.- can be given to one or more persons for completed, publishable or published work of excellent quality in the format of a journal article.

Aims

The principal goal is to support gerontological research in Switzerland originating from any field of science referring to age(ing). One purpose is to encourage knowledge transfer between research and practice – specifically, to acquire information from basic research for practical issues and, vice versa, to gain practical experience in order to serve research. We also support the scientific evaluation of gerontological practice. Another important scope is to make this knowledge public and to improve the understanding of aging throughout society in order to demonstrate possibilities for solidarity among different generations, age groups and professionals within the field of gerontology.

Participation

The contest is open to all junior researchers with a university or college degree. There are no age limits.

For more detailed information on the conditions of participation, you may contact the Secretary of the Center for Gerontology or view our Homepage.
